BNP's "Bring Our Boys Home" Campaign Takes Britain by Storm

John Bull Our Hero

Gives it to you straight

A change of tack this month: Enough for once of bemoaning the idiocy or treason of those dragging all we hold dear to hell in a handcart.

Time instead for some good news about the exciting BNP plans to win the power we need to put things right. Anyone can moan, but what marks out our British National Party as something really special is our leadership team's capacity for learning lessons from the world of practical business organisation.

You may recently have seen a really outstanding demonstration of this on our website:

<http://bnptv.org.uk/2010/06/bnp-distribution-and-membership-centre-belfast>.

The BNPTv minidocumentary showing the cool-headed professionalism of our young admin team in our Belfast centre. What a smashing group of people - and what a great service they give us!

What is sometimes forgotten is that well-run back-room organisation doesn't just happen. It has to be visualised, repaired, paid for, developed, 'de-snagged' and then managed. All these things have been done thanks to the loyalty and generosity of the readers of Hope & Glory - the largest circulation patriotic magazine in Britain.

Now comes the bit that sets my mutton chop whiskers all a'quiver! It's time to transfer the skills base behind our internal organisation and membership support into the external political world.

Nick Griffin, our revamped Elections Department and the party's business advisors have spent a great deal of time since the election looking at how Labour did so well compared to all of the smaller parties. "Hunger makes good kitchen", my old Grandma used to say (her generation knew that from experience, and it's a lesson a whole new generation is going to have to learn all over again).

Well, the BNP is hungry for success, and we're all going to see some great advances in political techniques coming out of the party kitchen over the next few months.

For a start, the state-of-the-art mass mailing and call centre technologies and skills acquired over the last two years are going to be transferred from Belfast to targeting specific voters and interest groups. Our two hard-working MEPs get unique advance warning of all the lunatic rules being planned by the Europhiles and their LibCon 'coalition' puppets in Westminster as part of their common purpose plan to dismantle our Britain.

We are going to take this information direct to the people whose livelihoods are under threat, canvass their opinions, ask for their advice, go back to them with news of our fight on their behalf, and process all this data so that, come election time, we can concentrate our efforts on people who already know from their personal experience that the BNP is serious.

In the Proportional Representation era we've now entered, it's this voter contact that can nudge our firm support up just the couple of percentage points needed to give us more breakthrough seats. No wishful thinking. Just up-to-date systems, vision and lots of hard work. That's the BNP recipe for success!

>>> Update From The Chairman

Dear Friend

This issue of Britain's largest circulation nationalist publication comes to you just as Mr Clegg and Mr Cameron will surely have realised they have inherited the helm of a bankrupt nation. The horrifying reality for both the Liberal Democrats and the Conservatives is that getting to grips with Labour's astronomical levels of debt can only translate into levels of collective unpopularity unheard of in British politics. The word "collective" is important here as it not only sums up the concept of coalition government, but also points towards the political consequences of two 'rival' political parties jumping into bed together.

Unless the coalition breaks up quickly, it will destroy the Lib Dems as the 'alternative' third party. It is against this backdrop, with the Labour Party in disgrace for years to come, that we British Nationalists must gear ourselves up for the challenge of becoming effectively Britain's third political party. The onset of full blown proportional representation in a growing number of major UK elections on the immediate horizon should help our cause considerably. These are exciting times.

All of us activists involved in the recent elections know that the level of support for our party out there far outweighs the actual number of votes we managed to achieve. Whilst frustrating, this is still a step forward by the electorate, who are clearly recognising not just the validity of our arguments but also beginning to reject the lies of the organised anti-Nationalist mass media machine.

May 4th effectively saw the death of a British political system that has been in existence for generations. With its demise comes new opportunities for those resilient enough to face adversity and smart and bold enough to adapt to change. Under North West dynamo Clive Jefferson, our new Elections Department is set to rise to meet that challenge.

Nick Griffin MEP.

Bring Our Boys Home Now!

"Bring Our Troops Home" Campaign Takes Britain by Storm

No less than 120 different groups and branches took part in the British National Party's "Support our Troops, Bring Our Boys Home" campaign which started in September.

Thousands of signatures were gathered up on the specially prepared forms which will be presented to Downing Street as an expression of public anger with the war, which has cost 338 British soldiers' lives (as at time of printing), billions of pounds sorely needed at home, and has incited Muslims in Britain and the world over to attempt terrorist attacks against British people.

From Hastings to Glasgow, from Cumbria to Manchester, from Swanly to Prestatyn, from Belfast to the Black Country, from County Durham to Bristol, from Exeter to Eastbourne, and many, many more town and cities, the BNP's message has been heard loud and clear: the British people want an end to this illegal and immoral war.

The BNP can rightfully claim to be the first political party to publicly oppose the warmongers in an article which appeared on the BNP website way back in 2002 which pointed out the series of lies, distortions and fabrications which the Labour Party, supported by the Conservatives, propagated in support of that conflict.

Even the aims of the invasion of Afghanistan, namely the destruction of the Taliban and the arrest of Osama Bin Laden, have never been achieved. Hundreds of our soldiers have been killed, maimed and injured - for what?

Fortunately the British people have access to one of the most dynamic and innovative political parties in the world, the British National Party.

We have led the way in opposing the warmongers from the very beginning, and the "Bring Our Boys Home" campaign has struck a deep chord within the hearts of the British nation.

In unprecedented sights from the East Midlands to Cumbria, from the East of England to the West Midlands and the South East, crowds of people formed queues at BNP tables to sign the petition calling for British troops to be withdrawn from Afghanistan, reports national organiser Clive Jefferson.

"I must admit that I was taken aback by the sight of queues waiting in line at a BNP table in Whitehaven," Mr Jefferson said.

"I knew the campaign would be popular, but I think even the BNP underestimated popular public opinion on this issue. It has been a runaway hit with the public and reports from all over the country confirm the view that the current conflict has to be the most unpopular war of recent times," he said.

The campaign is far and away the most successful non-election-time recruiting campaign ever, and the entire stock of 200,000 leaflets, 100 banners and thousands of petition forms were used up in the first week of campaigning, party Communications Officer Paul Golding added.

"The public response has vastly exceeded our expectations and we have ordered a rush printing of tens of thousands more leaflets to meet demand," Mr Golding said.

"Best of all is the fact that so many members of the public have been willing to put their names to a petition calling for an end to the Afghan war.

"They are delighted to hear that these petitions are going straight to Downing Street and so many have said that they want to accompany the forms so that they can tell the ConDem regime exactly what they think about this war."

Mr Golding added that the effectiveness of the table top recruiting method had once again proven its worth in the campaign.

"The tables and their eye-catching banners serve as a focal point for public attention far better than just some individuals standing in a street," he said.

"The truth is that none of this would have been possible without the dedicated work of the activists who turned out for this first weekend of action. The BNP thanks all these people collectively for their dedication and sacrifice."

Mongrel Britain?

Britain:
A Nation of immigrants?

Two weeks before the election this year, Sandy Walkington, a Liberal Democrat candidate for St Albans said, "We're all mongrels. I mean, this country is the most mongrel country in the world. In 200 years we'll all be coffee-coloured — and I've got no problem with that." It is outrageous and deeply offensive that politicians, the media and left-wing celebrities have promoted the lie that we are somehow all basically from mixed breeding stock in order to legitimise the invasion by hordes of foreigners.

Eddie Izzard said in his TV series Mongrel Britain, "our country has been massively diverse for most of its history — a blend of Angles, Saxons, Romans, Vikings, Celts." But the history of the British people shows that we have been here for thousands of years and that past invasions have contributed no more than five percent to our population. Izzard speaks with excitement about "rich diversity" and "a dynamic and vibrant mix of foreign genes." Yet there is nothing vibrant or dynamic about losing your job to cheap Eastern European workers or finding that you can't spot a white face in your high street. The diversity he speaks of isn't rich. The UK is poorer as a result of free handouts for immigrants and gifts to third world countries. Our cultural heritage has been savaged as we are forced to accept barbaric religions and the criminal scamming culture that we always knew was present in poor countries. How dare they smile condescendingly while they attempt to change history and teach us that we owe everything, as Izzard claims, to "waves of invasion, centuries of immigration and floods of foreign ideas."

The numbers of invaders were in fact few — mostly only in the tens of thousands and, crucially, all of the invaders' origins were limited to northern Europe. This is supported fully by up-to-date genetic evidence in the book Four Flags: The Indigenous People of Great Britain by Arthur Kemp.

Kemp presents genetic evidence proving that the vast majority of British people have ancestors going back 12,000 years when haplogroups R1b, I and R1a spread northwards. British people with the R1b1 DNA haplotypes have on average a 74 percent homogeneity, with the remainder coming from countries just across the sea. Historical records offer proof as well: The Romans invaded in AD 43 with an army of 40–45,000 men but only 16,000 legionaries were stationed here afterwards. Estimates for the population at that time are around 1.5 million; therefore, the effect of this invasion was one to two percent (Eagles Over Britannia: The Roman Army in Britain by Guy de la Bedoyere).

“In the sixth century the Anglo-Saxon element in the population of Britain amounted to no more than fifty to a hundred thousand” (Arthur’s Britain: History and Archaeology AD 367–634 by Leslie Alcock). Therefore, the Anglo-Saxon contribution would be somewhere between three and six percent. DNA evidence shows that the R1a Haplogroup for Anglo-Saxons in England is 4.5 percent, a remarkable correlation (Kemp, ibid).

Between 789–1104 AD, the Vikings were known for their ferocious attacks on villages but only small numbers actually settled. War bands were tiny: “from seven to thirty-five a band and above three dozen an army” (Anglo-Saxon England by Lloyd and Jennifer Laing).

After the Norman Conquest, William, Duke of Normandy, dismissed his mercenaries and nearly all returned to France. “The probability is that the Continental settlement did not involve more than 10,000 people — and perhaps as few as 5,000” (Offshore Islanders: From Roman Occupation to European Entry by Paul Johnson). “England simply acquired a new ruling class,” writes Johnson.

The Flemish and Walloons came from what is now Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxemburg and parts of northern France and Germany. About 16,000 were recorded in 1440, which was less than one percent. The population at the time was estimated between two and 2.5 million, and had diminished as a result of the Black Death (Roots of the Future: An Education Pack for Exploring Ethnic Diversity in Britain by Peter White).

The Jews also settled at various periods in history but did not approve of marriage to Gentiles. In 1290, the community of around 5,000 was expelled by Edward I. They returned slowly and by 1815, there were around 20–30,000. Around 55,000 Jews arrived between 1933 and 1939. Britain’s population was at 40 million in 1940, and therefore the Jewish contribution was at most 0.3 percent.

Throughout the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, there was a small trickle of people from all over Europe. In England and Wales, the 1871 census recorded 32,823 Germans, an Italian population of 5,063, again not significant amounts compared to the population of 20 million.

The Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) estimates 50,000 Huguenot and 80,000 French Protestants arrived between 1680 and 1720. About 40,000 of these left for America. However, around 1685, the population of Britain was four to 4.5 million, meaning that the contribution was still only about two percent (White, ibid; and Alien Immigrants to England by W Cunningham).

Between 1600 and 1800, people didn’t welcome foreigners with open arms and intermarriage of any sort was infrequent. Even when William of Orange came to England to unseat the unpopular James II, he was accompanied only by approximately 11,000 foot and 4,000 horse soldiers. The effect of his invasion was once again small.

Possibly one of the best examples is Cheddar Gorge Man who is an example of how people have stayed where they were for thousands of years. The remains of Cheddar Man were excavated in 1903 and have been dated at around 7,150 BC. In 1996, his DNA was profiled and a sample from 20 residents of a nearby village was taken. It produced two exact matches and one match with a single mutation. The close match was a history teacher named Adrian Targett. What this means is incredible — these people are direct descendants of Cheddar Man and still live in the same area, nearly 10,000 years later.

The historical and genetic evidence support the fact that there is indeed a native people of Britain who have a right to this land. We have as much right as the American Indians, Aborigines or Maoris.

So why do they wish to convince us that we are all mixed race? The agenda of previous Labour and Conservative governments have only ever been concerned about re-election at any cost. The proof is here. They have betrayed their own people. The erasure of the native British people today has already begun and it is legitimised by whitewashing over our truthful British history with lies. Don’t stand for it.

The Colonisation of Britain

One UK Passport Handed out Every Three Minutes

Official figures from the Office for National Statistics (ONS) have revealed that 203,790 people were naturalised as British citizens last year, with the vast majority originating in the Third World.

According to the ONS, the main originating territories of "new" British citizens were India (29 percent, or 59,520 of all grants in 2009), Africa (27 percent, or 55,235 of all grants), and "people from the Remainder of Asia" (17 percent, or 34,900 of all grants). Citizenship grants made to people from the "Remainder of Europe," that is, outside the European Economic Area, were 8 percent (15,955), while the "Americas and the Middle East" accounted for 6 percent each (12,880 and 11,615 respectively).

"All regions apart from the Middle East and almost all individual nationalities saw increases in the number of grants of British citizenship in 2009," the ONS report said.

"The reduction in the Middle East reflects grants to people who were previously nationals of Iraq which decreased by 38 percent in 2009 to 5,495 from 8,895 in 2008."

All grants: 203,705 (a 58 percent increase from 2008).

This means that a British passport was handed to a foreigner every three minutes and that more than half a million immigrants are entering Britain every year.

* Meanwhile, it has also been announced that the European Union will soon end all visa restrictions on Bosnians and Albanians even though those nations are not currently EU members.

This means that anyone who can gain access to either of those two nations will, like any other EU resident, have complete freedom of movement to enter Britain and parasite off the now legendary benefits system in this country.

Horrified at the impressive 563,743 votes obtained by the British National Party during the last general election, the enemies of the British people have intensified their attacks on the party using both internal and external methods of subversion. Although the Establishment and their far left storm troopers have tried to portray the election results as bad for the BNP because it gained no parliamentary seats, the reality is that the vote total extrapolated out translates into a significant increase on the BNP's nationwide 2009 Euro election vote.

Conscious of this fact, our enemies have now concentrated their efforts on breaking the BNP at this critical phase in our growth. Several months ago, they realised that the increasing professionalisation, fund raising and infrastructure growth of the party was critical to its increasing success. As a result, they have targeted that part of the organisation more than anything else. Weekly coverage in the Belfast fishwrap newspapers have sought to openly incite violence against Jim Dowson and the call centre operation, while on the mainland, the far left has targeted Mr Dowson constantly in their publications.

Steel Hats On!

Attacks on BNP Intensify After General Election

The outright lies (for example, the allegation that Mr Dowson still owns the BNP's Truth Truck, or that he gets a commission on all money collected through the Belfast call centre, or that he "controls" the party) spat out by the far left Communist Party front organisations such as Searchlight, have been swallowed up by the ever present array of far right crackpots, loons and dissenters who hang around the fringes of the BNP.

These allegations have been repeated almost word-for-word by these internal agents posing as "dissenters" - despite every single one of the bogus claims having been clinically dismantled and disproved.

Now is not the time to fall prey to internet-based cranks, rumour mongers and former employees who were not up to the job. Now is the time to stand firm, put the steel hats on and weather the storm so that the BNP will be ready to take on the awesome responsibility of saving our nation from submersion under a Third World invasion.

10,000 Inquiries

BNP Inquiries Top 10,000 in Election Success

The number of inquiries into the British National Party's call centre from 1 April to the end of May 2010 topped 10,000 while membership of the party has risen to in excess of 14,000, new figures from the administration department have revealed.

"The mail which came in during the week after the election also contained £23,000 in donations to the BNP," said Clive Jefferson, BNP National Elections Officer. "A few years ago so many inquiries would have swamped our system for months, but our Belfast team and dispatch centre in Nuneaton took it in their stride. That is a tremendous achievement and is a tribute to the professionalism of the back office staff and the BNP's administration team," he continued. "The latest batch of inquiries has taken the total number received since 1 April to well over 10,000. All of the previous inquiries have now been processed and databased."

Membership figures broke the 14,000 mark for the first time in the BNP's history, making it larger than UKIP in terms of signed up paying members. As of the end of May 2010, the BNP has for the first time, over 14,000 members, an increase of 3,724 since April 2009.

This figure is very impressive, especially considering that the largest formal lapsing of non-renewing members that will be actioned at any point in the year (i.e. those with a December expiry date) has already taken place.

There were 3514 members due to renew in December 2009. Of these, 2915 renewed, and 599 did not renew — that's an 83% renewal rate! Since April of last year we have issued another 565 five-year loyalty badges. The new 'super' integrated membership system is now fully up and running, working 'hand in hand' with the fundraising and Trafalgar Club databases. This is easier to use, faster and more professional than anything we have had access to in the past, and has totally revolutionised the central database system. All of the innovations — and the capacity to handle the huge amount of inquiries — has only been possible due to the massive investment in the party's infrastructure made over the past two years.

This in turn, would not have been possible without the generosity and support of you, our members and supporters. Britain's future thanks you!

The Midas Consultancy

Why the Left are Worried

It is normal practise for mainstream political parties to draw upon the expertise and skills of industry professionals in order to help advance their cause.

In late 2007, the BNP contracted the Midas Consultancy, an international practise headed by senior consultant Jim Dowson, to run our fundraising and administration operations. Here we provide a summary of Midas's involvement with the BNP since November 2007.

BARGAIN FOR THE BNP

The primary involvement of the Midas Consultancy is to provide professional fundraising. Below are the yearly figures raised by the Midas Consultancy on behalf of the party. These figures speak for themselves:

2007 = £100,000 (December only)
2008 = £662,217
2009 = £1,608,321

As can be seen from the above figures, we have jumped from a donations income of approximately £100,000 per year to a staggering £1.6 million per year within a two-year period, mainly thanks to the expertise and efforts mainly of the Midas Consultancy. The figures show just how good this relationship is for the BNP.

Funds raised by Midas since 2007 = £2,362,000
Consultant fees etc. since 2007 = £ 165,000
Income for the BNP = £2,197,000

FURTHER SAVINGS

The best news is that Jim Dowson and Midas have also been working to reduce party overheads. Thanks to a large range of cost cutting exercises initiated by Mr Dowson, the BNP has cut well over £150,000 off its operating expenses.

Here are just some of Midas's cost-cutting achievements:

Print costs (leaflets, magazines etc.): £93,000
Reducing outgoings and expenses: £63,000.

In these difficult economic times it is crucial that the party works closely with fundraising specialists. The Midas Consultancy contract is up next month and fresh tenders are invited.
